Dear Boulder Road Runners,

How time has flown. Six months ago Dan and I were elected to our posts as interim officers. The mandate from the board was that we should maintain the status quo. I think we did.

At the next First Monday Social it will be time to elect the officers for the remaining half of the year. (Next January we will return to an annual officer election.) Numerous members have expressed that Dan and I continue through to the end of the year.

Dan and I have discussed, if we go forward as officers, some things we would like to see implemented. One is that we need to have regular club business meetings. The purpose of these meetings would be multi-faceted. They would be to insure that interested members would have a working knowledge of how routine tasks are accomplished within the club, making future transitions smoother. We also think it's time to discuss some new events, etc. It would also be a leadership team builder for the club.

Interested people should talk to Dan or me about scheduling our first business meeting sometime in June. I was thinking Avery Brewing would be a good meeting place.

RACE4Kids' Health Expo Booth

Sunday, April 15.

Boulder Road Runners had a booth at the Race4Kids Expo. It quickly became a center of activity. Not only were we giving away two entries to the Bolder Boulder, but our booth was the drop off point for One World Running shoe donation.

According to Mike Sandrock, we collected over two hundred pairs of shoes during this three hour event. This would not have been possible without the quick organization of this drive by Genevieve Jacobi.

Other volunteers that day include: Gavin Slater and Donna Bridges.

Thanks for all you help!

Track Series begins in June.

you're running, you can still volunteer.

CU UPDATES

C.U. runner, Shalaya Kipp is currently ranked second in the world with steeple chase time of 9:43:09

Kipp won the inaugural PAC 12 steeple chase championship. on May 12, with a time of 9:57:39.

Discus thrower and coach Casey Malone is looking forward to the Olympic trials, June 21- Jul 1st. If he makes the team, it will be his third trip to the Olympics.

Meet Tam Stubbs by Gail Hunter

One of the Boulder Road Runners' quiet heroes is Tam Stubbs, who turned 80 last week. When the Boulder Road Runners began the "beat your age" competition, Tam began winning it. The gap between his age and his time is huge. Last year, when he was 79 years old, his time was 58:22. He has won his age division fourteen times, and this year he's training for the fifteenth.

Tam has always been competitive. He was born in La Junta, where his dad worked for the Santa Fe Railroad. When he was young, the Super Chief would roll through town carrying movie stars and others who liked to go in style, as it was an elegant means of traveling from coast to coast. Tam began running when he was young, playing basket-ball in the winter and participating in track in the summer. In his junior year, the school won the football, basketball, and track championships. Tam wasn't a football player, as he'd had a serious injury to his ankle when he was eleven years old. His father joined the military during World War II, and was sent to India. Tam's family stayed in La Junta. Playing hockey with bent tree limbs as sticks, a battered tin can as a puck, and rocks to mark the goals, he was hit in the ankle by a fellow player. A few days later, he became very ill, as a staph infection had developed in his fibula. His mother called the local doctor. The doctor knew of penicillin, but it wasn't available to civilians, so he suggested she take Tam to the local military base. The base didn't have penicillin either, so they put Tam in a flight suit and put him in a B-25 bomber to fly him to Fitzsimmons Hospital in Denver. It was January, and a snowstorm forced the plane to land in Colorado Springs. From there he was taken to Denver in an army ambulance (think M*A*S*H and picture a dark khaki vehicle with a canvas top). Two little white pills given to him by the military doctor made the trip more fun than it might otherwise have seemed. He was operated on by a physician from the Mayo Clinic. Convalescence at the hospital was long, over a month. Tam was an anomaly, a lone child surrounded by seriously injured men from the Pacific front. He returned home with a cast, crutches, and a crush on a pretty nurse who had taken him for walks as he became stronger.

As a high school student in La Junta, Tam was active in scouting as well as sports. An enterprising troop leader encouraged the troop to take an interest in the culture of the Kiowa. Working toward their Eagle Scout badges, his troop learned the Koshare, or clown, dances of the Kiowa, as well as the Hopi snake dance, which was performed with live snakes (not rattlers). The troop toured the United States for three weeks, performing in Madison Square Garden, at Red Rocks, and in theaters in Chicago and California.

Tam's family moved to Williamsburg, Virginia, in 1949, where he graduated from high school. His basketball skills were of interest to a recruiter from William and Mary, where he graduated in 1954. Shortly thereafter he married Carla, whom he met at William and Mary. Following college, he was drafted and underwent basic training at Ft. Jackson in South Carolina. At Ft. Jackson, he was chosen to play on the post's basketball team, which came within one game of winning the military championships. His college major of bacteriology led him to a 30-year career in the pharmaceutical industry.

A long-time Boulder Road Runner, Tam has participated in the Hood to Coast relay and climbed Mt. Kilimanjaro with other Road Runners. His photography of his trips to Kenya with the BRR and with his daughter Marcia makes one want to start packing. On Memorial Day, we can all take courage in Tam's consistency and his amazing ability to keep beating that clock.

There was no current picture of Tam available for the newsletter. It was agreed that this picture is a pretty accurate image of Tam as a younger man. The only real difference between then and now is the color of his hair.

When we grow up we want to be just like Dan Pierce.

British Invasion: Mom Caroline with daughters Vicki and Rachel Cronin. Vicki has been living, working at I.G.B., taking classes and running in Boulder for nearly a year. Vicki has been training with Richs' group and is a regular at the Sunday runs. She has confessed to being a science nerd. But, she is also a very good athlete. This Memorial Day she will be testing herself at the Bolder Boulder. Good luck Vicki!

The British invasion will continue this month when Alasdair Russell arrives to stay with Andy and Sandy Edmondson. His plans include working and training in the Boulder area.

Colfax Marathon

We will have our tent in the club expo area near the finish line. Feel free to drop off gear for pick up after the race. Come by and rest in the shade or just visit. People watching should be great.

Nutrition Before and After a Workout

There are several factors that come together to make a productive workout or race successful. One of the least well practiced factors is a plan for your nutrition before and after an activity.

Pre-exercise food and fluids: consume carbohydrate rich snacks or meals to top off muscle stores. If you get pre-competition jitters, a liquid meal maybe a better choice than whole foods. Include small portions of protein. Protein helps to build and repair muscle. Be sure the meal is low in fat and fiber to avoid digestion problems. Meals should be consumed three to four hours before the workout. Thirty minutes to an hour before, intake should be limited to sports drinks, water, sports beans, gels etc. or fruit.

Begin your post event nutrition recovery within thirty minutes of the event. Quick recovery foods that contain both carbohydrate and protein are desired. Repeat at the two hour and hour time windows.

Both training and nutrition require a plan. (Where have you heard that before?) Have recovery food in your gear bag. Find out what works for you and stick with it.

On Tuesday and Thursday join the recovery group at Big Daddy's at about 8:30 a.m. On Saturday morning Turleys has become a popular location to recover.

Thanks to Lois Calhoun for the idea and background information for this article. Visit www.scandpg.org for more detailed explanation of pre and post event recovery.
